Announcements and Client meeting discussion

During this date the team had a scheduled conference call with our client, SRP. The team was able to talk with Kyle Yamamoto and we discussed many different topics about our project. The first topic of discussion was the budget and how the team would be able to purchase items that were needed for our project. The next topic was what our final design would look like. The team had decided on a final design and Taylor McCormack would make the design of the final product. This design would be sent to Kyle and he would review the design and give us feedback in our next meeting with him. This was pretty much the premise of the whole meeting we had with Kyle. After the meeting with Kyle, the team stayed a little longer and discussed assignments that would need to be completed later in the semester. The main assignments were to get the final prototype summary/prototype finished and finish the CAD package. The team would reconvene after the thanksgiving break to finish these said tasks.
